

'Rainbow Project' has touch of glass May 4, 2013

Written by
Forrest Sellers

OAKLEY — Youngsters will have a chance to bring color to a rainbow. The Brazee Street Studios in Oakley is coordinating a "Rainbow Project" for students ages 3 to 18.

"The kids work collaboratively to create a glass rainbow," said instructor Emily Repp, a youth coordinator at Brazee Street Studios.

Each student will work on individual tiles, using different colors and types of glass, to create a section of a rainbow that when combined will fill a small room, said Repp.

"I like that you get to design your own pieces," said Brady Boyer, 7, a participant in the class and a resident of Park Hills, Ky.

Classes started in May, but enrollment is still open. Classes run Thursday through Saturday at various times. Cost to enroll is $10 per child. The completed rainbow will be on display June 14 through 27, at the studio, which is located at 4426 Brazee Street.

For information or to register, visit the website www.brazeestreetstudios.com or call 321-0206.

Instructor Emily Repp, left, works on a glass project with students Shannon McCarthy, and brothers Brady and Sean Boyer at the Brazee Street Studios. The studio has a workshop in which students can create their own colored tiles which when combined will form a rainbow.

/ Forrest Sellers/The Community Press